SATURDAY EVENING, JUNE 14.

A WATERLOO RELIC.—A dispatch from Brussels says the approaching anniversary of the battle of Waterloo bids fair to be marked by a deplorable scandal, for, on that very day, it is announced there will be sold at public auction one of the most interesting relics of the conflict. This is nothing less than the now deserted brewery in Rue de la Blachisserie in the huge upper room of which was held the Duchess of Richmond's famous ball on the eve of Waterloo. This was the ball immortalized by Byron in "Childe Harold," in the starry beginning: "There was a sound of revelry by night," "Traces still remain of a temporary passage-way which connected this improved ball room with the Duchess of Richmond's drawing room in the house on Rue des Condoes, which is now occupied by a church sisterhood. That such an historic place should be sold at auction and then probably torn down on the very anniversary of Waterloo is regarded as disgraceful in the extreme. There has been talk in England of raising a fund for the purchase and preservation of the building, but nothing definite has been done. There are, by the way, a few survivors of the company at that famous ball. Chief among them is the Dowager Lady de Ros, whose niece, Lady Blisbrough, was one of the bridesmaids at the wedding of Queen Victoria. Lady de Ros at the time of Waterloo was known as Lady Georgiana Lennox and was the daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Richmond, who gave the ball. As daughter of the host and hostess, she was a conspicuous and favored personage, and danced with all the illustrious men present, including "Brunswick's noted chieftain." She is now ninety-five years old, with health and faculties unimpaired.

KILLED BY THREAD IN HER EAR.—Miss Cyrena Alice Boyd, a young lady, aged 19 years, whose parents reside in York county, died the other day under peculiar circumstances. A few weeks ago she was visiting friends in San Francisco, and while there had a severe cold. She was very particular to keep her white silk in the puncture, but the thread finally worked its way into her ear. The effect of the exposure began to manifest itself in her ears, already swollen and sore. Then she became alarmed, and upon her father's advice, she came to this city to secure medical attention. Her ears swelled rapidly, the swelling extending to her face, and finally one of her eyes was closed completely. Erysipelas set in, blood poisoning followed, and then it was evident that her life was beyond the power of saving. A consultation of doctors was ordered, but death came about 4:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.—San Francisco Examiner
